Put Your Best Foot Forward

Understanding the Issues + Advocating for your Profession

Allison Levy will discuss the legislative issues affecting the interior design profession and the different opportunities for interior designers to get involved in shaping the laws and the public perception of their profession. Learn about legislative activities and advocacy efforts across the country and what you can do to promote your career and your profession at home.

Allison is the Senior Director of Government and Regulatory Affairs for IIDA. She has a law degree from the University of Michigan and is a licensed attorney. Following law school, Allison worked on several political campaigns and in government affairs for a museum in New York. She brings her strong background in grassroots advocacy and law to IIDA, serving as a resource for IIDA Chapters and coalitions in their advocacy work.
